

Horses and Poetry

If a horse were able to recite the most beautiful poem ever written, the man riding the horse would not benefit, for he would not expect a horse to recite poetry and knowing that, the horse would not expect him to listen.